Wisconsin’s private, nonprofit colleges and universities have risen to the crisis of the COVID-19 pandemic. Campuses have sent students home; the entire curriculum has been reconfigured in an online format; courses requiring work-experience are being redesigned to maintain the highest standards of excellence while keeping students on track to graduation and to a career; room and board payments are being refunded. These costs are significant, but the human cost is even greater on students, faculty, and staff.

Estimated losses for Spring, Summer, and Fall 2020 to be $245 million

Losses
- WAICU members estimate a combined loss of approximately $81.0 million for Spring 2020.
- An additional $26.7 million in combined losses is projected for Summer 2020.
- Fall 2020 losses are projected at a combined total of more than $137.3 million.

Potential loss of FUTURE workforce

Wisconsin’s workforce at risk
WAICU institutions rely on tuition to operate and losing even a relatively small number of students will have significant implications for programming, putting our future workforce at risk.

WAICU members produce 23 percent of all bachelor’s degrees and 35 percent of all advanced degrees in the state. They also produce disproportionately high numbers of graduates in critical occupations.

- 27% of engineering bachelor’s degrees
- 46% of nursing (BSN) degrees
- 36% of health professions bachelor’s degrees
- 46% of education graduate degrees
- 54% of medical doctors
- 45% of business advanced degrees

Economic impact of WAICU institutions on local communities

WAICU members employ over 18,000 community members.
Students are our top priority, but there is a human and educational toll where employees at WAICU members face reductions in force, which in turn requires more sacrifice to maintain academic offerings and excellence.
